

U.S. INVESTIGATING ARMY AUTO BIDS

Bids, Three Weeks Old, on Autos and Trucks Found Still Unopened.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The war department's program for motorizing the army tonight apparently had been halted until a grand jury could inquire into one phase of government contract bidding.

Close upon the news that Secretary Dern had requested the justice department to investigate rumors of lobbyist activities in war department matters, word came that bids that were to have been opened about three weeks ago for a number of light trucks and passenger automobiles had not been acted upon.

A spokesman for the war department, when asked if the bids were held up in connection with the sifting of lobbyist charges, said:

"They haven't come along, that's all we know."

Confers With Jury.

Assistant Secretary of War Woodring, who last night issued an order barring Joseph Silverman, dealer in army surplus supplies, from contact with any person in the war department, conferred for two hours today with the grand jury.

He was followed by an officer in the ordinance department, Captain Thomas H. Nixon. Two officials of motor companies, J. B. Woodside, of the sales organization of General Motors, and Benjamin Outisman, president of a local automobile agency, then had their hour with the grand jury.

The United States district attorney, Leslie C. Garnett, said each had

Editor Fails to Talk Writer Out of Suicide

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—(AP)—

The city editor of a Los Angeles newspaper endeavored to talk Jack McGuire, song writer, out of his telephonic declaration of intent to commit suicide today, but failed by the margin of a few seconds.

"This is Jack McGuire at 1624 West 56th street," said the voice at the other end of the line. "I just called to tell you I'm going to bump myself off."

The editor parried questions, and while mulling his phone instructed a reporter to call police.

While a police car raced to the address the editor tried to argue McGuire into postponing his act.

"It's no use," McGuire said. "I've had a lot of trouble. My wife left me last night and took the baby with her. It's the depression. Maybe this publicity will put across some of my songs and she can have the money."

The receiver clicked. Police broke into McGuire's room, but at that instant he raised a pistol to his head and fired. He died at the emergency hospital.

signed waivers of immunity against prosecution, but he pointed out that this had no significance and that it was merely a matter of policy in cases involving the government.

$2,000,000 Conspiracy.

The grand jury inquiry had its origin in charges of a $2,000,000 conspiracy for the sale to the government of 4,000 automobiles for the army, purchased out of public works funds.

Coincidentally with word that the bids for the light trucks and passenger cars remained in war department files unopened, it was disclosed that only $800,000 of the $10,000,000 for motorization of the army had been expended to date.

The retarding of the motorization program and the hold up in the truck and passenger car bids was viewed as indicating the war department quietly had been conducting an investigation for some time.

Principals in $10 Slaying of Pastor To Plead Insanity as Defense

MRS. SAUNDERS.

THEODORE MATHERS.

REV. G. V. SAUNDERS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 6.—(AP)—

A defense based on insanity or temporary derangement due to emotional stress and fear was predicted by officials here today as they gathered the loose ends of their case against the defendants in the $10 murder of the Rev. G. V. Saunders.

A hint that such a defense may be presented also was given by relatives and friends of Theodore Mathers, 19, who has confessed he shot Saunders.

Mathers, who was a roommate at Saunders while both attended an embalming school here, was said by friends to have been ill for more than a year with a heart ailment. Acquaintances said he was often morose and that last August he shot himself but the bullet was deflected by a rib.

Investigators were told that the youth has since threatened to end his life.

Attorneys retained for Mrs. Neoma Saunders declined to comment on their plans for defense. Mrs. Saunders, who is suffering from tuberculosis, told police she gave Mathers $10 to have her husband slain because she feared he would kill her and their two children. She expressed the conviction that Saunders was insane and said he had tried twice to commit suicide.

Mrs. Saunders is still being attended by her nurse, Mrs. Mabel Balke, who is being held on a vagrancy charge because police say she had knowledge of the plot.

Counsel for Masil Roe, who was in the Saunders automobile when the preacher was shot, indicated a not guilty plea would be made.

LAND IS OFFERED FOR NEW AIRPORT

airport to serve the northern section of Atlanta," said Mr. Hartsfield. "All have said the proposed port should be located in the Camp Gordon area in order that service between the landing field be within 10 minutes of Decatur and Buckhead."

Mr. Hartsfield called attention to the fact that Atlanta is the only city of its size in the United States with only one airport. Stressing the need for additional facilities for private flyers and the promotion of safety in the case of local fogs, he said that two or more fields were essential.

The speaker also cited the new arrangements under the Georgia law how cities could join together in establishment of public facilities.

Speakers Franchise Move.

Announcement of the offer of Mr. Sawtell was made by Jesse Draper, well known figure in aviation activities here. Other speakers were Walter Hendrix, Fulton county commissioner, and J. E. McCrary, of the firm of J. B. McCrary & Co., engineers, with headquarters at Decatur.

Mr. Hendrix said the need for a high speed highway from Decatur field existed and endorsed the expediency of a north side landing field. He said Fulton county fully appreciated the benefit of Decatur field and would continue to develop it.

Mr. McCrary related the experiences of his firm in building the American landing field during the World War and with comparisons sought to prove that the area of Camp Gordon was the ideal site.

Ivan Allen, prominent Atlanta civic leader, stressed the advantage gained by Atlanta in developing Candler field and added that if the city is to hold her position as the "air hub" of the southeast other facilities must be developed. Another who is in favor of the proposal was George Hamilton, state treasurer.

John Candler, aviation aide to Governor Talmadge, called attention in his talk to the large number of citizens of Druid Hills who could own and operate airplanes if convenient landing field were offered.

DeKalb's Co-operation Pledged.

Warner Hall, associate editor of the DeKalb County official publication of DeKalb county, pledged the co-operation of citizens of his county and reviewed "efforts over the years to bring such a possibility to pass."

John K. Ottley, president of the First National Bank, was another speaker who lauded the movement, and, representing Chambliss, Allen M. Pierce said the people of his community, just north of the proposed site, heartily concurred in the plan.

Calling upon interested people of DeKalb county to confer with him, C. A. Matthews, commissioner, said that if the project is presented in definite form all "details will be worked out so far as legal phases are concerned."

During the meeting it also was announced that the Georgia Power Company would donate an engineering survey made four years ago when it was thought a large aircraft factory might be located here.

Upon motion of J. W. Pickelshimer, of Buckhead, the club went on record as approving the project and a committee of five, including Mr. Pickelshimer, H. W. Evans, Matt Perkins, W. A. Brand and George P. Murray, was appointed to confer with a similar committee from Decatur, and Commissioner Matthews, of DeKalb county, to work out details as soon as possible.

Doctor Says Insult Is Able to Travel

ATHENS, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Dr. Anthony Hanotia, who examined Samuel Insull last month, declared today that there is "physically no question that Insull is able to travel."

Two University of Athens professors, meanwhile, sent to the ministry of the interior a sealed report on the health of the former Chicago utilities executive.

Unless Insull leaves Greece before next Monday he will have to travel without a passport.

Lack of a valid American passport would not prevent the former Chicago utilities man from leaving Greece for the United States, but he would be unable to travel legally elsewhere.

The state department said today that when Insull's passport recently was validated so he might get visas to travel out of Greece if deported by the Greek government, a time limit was fixed upon the validity terminating February 15.

What 120 Millions Think

A Symposium of the American Reaction to the New Deal.

This is the fourth in a series of daily articles by Ralph W. Page, economist and writer, who has toured the country to discover what its people think of the national recovery program and is now putting his findings into writing.

By RALPH W. PAGE.

(Copyright, 1934, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

The blanket code was accepted everywhere as a novelty and patriotic pageant, so it leaped in my travels. It was inaugurated in typical, efficient American style by conservative leaders in every city and town with practically unanimous support.

Many places claim the record for speed and percentage of enrollment. Probably Oklahoma City, with an honor roll in a public square carrying the name of every enterprise in the city holds the palm. By the time I came along vexing the people with questions, opinion had pretty well crystallized.

Everyone said it was a good idea, that it was fair, and that it ought to prime the pump and get money into the hands of the consumer. The man in the street said it was working. The labor leaders said it was working on only two cylinders because the employees were cheating. Most merchants and factory managers said that the more other people paid in wages the better their own businesses would become. But each one very shortly perceived he was being required to make cash investment in wages, and was heard to say that he was quite willing provided his income increased in time to save him before his capital was all gone.

Mathematics.

The enormous popular support, including the many enforcement boards, merely gave an impetus to events. Eventually the experiment worked out mathematically. Small agricultural towns with no source of increased income dropped out. Concerns that actually could not keep up the pace were politely let out. Lawyers and efficiency experts worked overtime to cut the expense of the rule to a minimum under the letter of the agreement, in many places. The large national concerns, with surpluses in their treasuries and the full glare of publicity on their actions, lived up to the spirit and employed a vast number of people.

By Christmas the slack between wages and income had pretty well been taken up or the general problem had been superseded by individual problems facing each industry. The introduction of the industrial codes had every man in the country busy, and turned a general discussion into concentrated attention upon the specific details of each man's business.

For good or ill, the NRA has provided the country permanently with a shorter working week and established the fixed idea that a man is entitled to a minimum wage. Both principles, or rather facts, are drastic modifications of the old order. To limit the hours of labor and to fix the price of labor without regard to its supply or demand are simply another way of limiting the productivity and hence the possible profit of an individual enterprise.

Little Opposition.

Among practical men, as distinguished from financiers and theorists there seems no serious opposition to the fact accompli. Every poor devil is entitled to a living. Shorter hours get rid of the overproduction that was the producer's nightmare. Other people's wages go to my customers. So the reasoning goes. But that is not the end. There is no end, or possibility of an end. For once it is established that shorter hours are beneficial the question arises "how short?" This is not an academic question, it is a clarion call to battle and all sturdy warriors eager for the fray can join in. It will not be settled in our lifetime.

"Thanks to my Dr. Locke Shoes I've Lost 6 Pounds"

Absurd, of course. No shoes can reduce you. But it does seem to be an established fact that M. W. LOCKE SHOES MAKE WOMEN WANT TO WALK. And a couple of miles, taken in a swinging stride morning and evening, will take off the pounds. M. W. Locke shoes are perfect walking shoes. Slash in Bus Rates Is Sought by Board

The Georgia public service commission Tuesday was preparing to issue a rule nisi calling upon bus and truck companies to show cause why their passenger and freight rates should not be reduced. The order, which Chairman J. P. Wilhoit, of the commission, admitted has been drawn but which he said had not been acted on formally, is expected to be issued this morning.

The commission has just completed an investigation of railroad freight charges and has set for hearing February 13 an order calling on the railroads to show why the present low but temporary passenger fares should not be reduced. It was said Tuesday that in some instances bus fares were higher than railroad fares.

The order citing the buses is believed to be the first ever issued in the state calling on them to show cause why rates should not be cut.

4,000 REPORTED SLAIN BY CHINESE INSURGENT

PEIPING, Feb. 6.—(P)—Four thousand Ninghai provincial troops were massacred when forces under the rebel general, Sun Tien-ying, occupied Pinglo, said Chinese news dispatches today.

The advance also reported that 700 workers had been killed in a coal mine explosion in the region. General Sun Tien-ying recently opened hostilities against the governor of Ninghsia, who refused to allow rebel forces to move through the province en route to Chianghai province, formerly Kokonor, where the Sun Tien-ying was slated to become land reclamation commissioner.

ment that each industry could make its own rules, binding upon the whole industry, subject to governmental agreement on behalf of labor and the general public—that is, in cases of conflict with other industries or the newly discovered consumer.

Well, what happened in the actual world of struggling men? The celebrated American businessman jumped into his element. He started to organize. Not since the war has anyone seen such co-ordinating. This people have genius. Considering that the owners and managers of every industry all started at once to formulate all the conflicting details of America's infinite and often conflicting business, it is amazing to record that the job was done with the utmost dispatch and so little wrangling or complaint that an army of reporters hunting trouble could scarcely find any.

Any idea that this performance was thrust upon an arrogant and independent people by government edict is ludicrous. The great textile operators, the steel dynasty, the oil companies, the lumbermen and all the rest went to work with their technicians and attorneys to carve out a new era in business.

Not Socialism. The results cannot be obscured by the crumbs of dramatic friction that were fed the public. The job was accomplished. The mills are operating today under a collective government chosen by the industry. This is neither paternalism nor socialism nor any other ism. It is industrial democracy—a form of government control thoroughly familiar to all the people and startling in only one respect. That respect is the recognition that workmen as well as money investors have a vested interest and hence a voice in the conduct of the affair.

Another element has been injected but it is hardly novel and meets with the intelligent approval of a sufficient majority to insure its effect. That is recognition of the fact that in the modern world all business enterprises are dependent upon each other, that in the end they prosper or decline together, and hence that there has to be an umpire or arbiter representing them all—that is, the public, or a governing committee.

Peer's Divorce Papers Served On Lady Ashley, Fairbanks

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Lady Sylvia Ashley, once the darling of London's Midnight Folies, her voice choked today with a notice of her husband's divorce action, in which Douglas Fairbanks Sr., was named respondent.

Service was effected on the American actor this morning. Both were made personally—the slim, bob-haired former song and dance favorite being reached at her Mayfair residence. How and where Fairbanks was reached was undisclosed.

He is in seclusion with friends somewhere in London, preparing to leave for Spain in two or three days. The question of whether young Lord Ashley, who returned over the week-end from the United States, will sue for damages has not been decided, according to his attorneys, but may have an important bearing on whether the suit will be contested.

Shortly before she was given the notice, Lady Ashley, her voice choked with emotion, told the Associated Press that she was completely in the dark concerning the action of her long-estranged husband, whom she married February 3, 1927, but left less than a year later.

"I know absolutely nothing about it," she declared at her home in the fashionable Mayfair section. "I am sorry; I just can't make a statement."

Fairbanks in a statement issued through his London representative said, "I have nothing to say; I have never made a practice of talking about my personal affairs and do not intend to begin now."

Lord Ashley, 33 years old and an alumnus of Eton, Sandhurst Military College, and Cambridge, is the heir of the ninth earl of Shaftesbury, former lord mayor of Bristol and a prominent churchman. Lord Ashley was once the aide-de-camp of the Bombay governor and the commander-in-chief in India. Now he is the Dorset county justice of the peace.

Lady Ashley, the former Sylvia Hawkes, has frequently been seen with Fairbanks in the past few weeks. Her friends have called her "daring" and "sensational," and her activities have furnished many tea-table topics.

The young lord was in seclusion at Swindon, 70 miles from London and refused, also, to discuss the case. Under the law Fairbanks and Lady Ashley have eight days in which to appear. After that they would be free to defend the suit and would have two weeks more in which to file papers.

It was added, however, that the American would leave London to look over a location for a film play Fairbanks plans to start in Spain in three weeks or so.

London society circles were astonished at the news of the action, Fairbanks' marriage to Mary Pickford was hailed as ideal, and her divorce action last December against her 50-year-old husband created a sensation, especially since he liked to pose in London as a hen-pecked but happy husband.

Lady Ashley and Fairbanks have frequently been seen in London west end parties with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Gertrude Lawrence, popular musical comedy star.

Young Fairbanks and Miss Lawrence "have discussed marriage, but have taken no action," he told a reporter last night.

Miss Lawrence said she planned to leave London for Mallorca immediately after the musical comedy, "Nymph Errant," in which she has achieved the biggest hit of her career, closes on February 17.

Rumors were current that young Doug will accompany his father to Spain and visit Mallorca later.

$4,256,002 Tax Lien Filed Against Dwyer

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6.—(AP)—A federal income tax lien for $4,256,002.75 against William V. "Bill" Dwyer, chief stockholder of the Gables Racetrack, was filed in federal and circuit court here today.

The lien affects all properties of Dwyer, which may be found in this district, and follows a judgment obtained in federal court in New York. The claim includes $3,714,826.53 unpaid federal taxes on income from an alleged liquor business and other enterprises for nine years, and $541,176.22 interest.

NEW POWER SLASH IS MADE BY BOARD

reductions brought about by the new rate bring the total reductions ordered by the present commission which was appointed by Governor Eugene Talmadge last July to about $1,000,000 yearly. The savings given residential customers in an order issued last fall are estimated at $608,000 yearly while large commercial customers, numbering only about 800 have been given reductions totalling $100,000 a year.

As in the new schedule set up for residential customers, the commission in its order, Tuesday set up an "objective rate" under which customers whose bills under the new rate equal or total the bills of current month of last year under the old rate will be given a further reduction in rates. That is, they will be given a greater reduction if they increase the use of power to such an extent that the company's income from them equals or passes the income of the same month last year.

The board chairman pointed out that the new commercial rate will save 70 cents per month for all customers using a 10 ampere meter and $1.50 a month for customers using a meter of more than 10 amperes.

Savings Are Shown. The old commercial rate gave the customer the first five kilowatt hours of current on up to 10 ampere meters for $1.11 and on over 10 ampere meters for $2.22 with the next 30 KWH at $2.22 cents, the next 165 at 6.66 cents, the next 800 at 5.55 cents, the next 1,000 at 4.44 cents and all over 2,000 at 3.33 cents with a 10 per cent reduction. If the bill was paid before the tenth of the month.

Under the new schedule the customer gets the first 30 kilowatt hours or less for 7.22 cents per KWH, the $1 minimum bill remaining in effect. The next 170 are at 6.66 cents per KWH, the next 800 for 5.55 cents, the next 1,000 for 4.44 cents and all over 2,000 at 3.33 cents with the 10 per cent off for prompt payment of bills.

If a customer steps up use of current to such an extent that the "objective" rate is made applicable he will pay the following rates:

For the first 15 KWH or less $1.11 per month; for the next 95 KWH, 5 cents per KWH; for the next 3,000 KWH, 3.33 cents per KWH, and for all over 4,000 at the rate of 2.22 cents per KWH.

The power company accepted the reduction without comment.

MARRIAGE PAPERS FINALLY ISSUED TO 'DADDY'S' CHILD

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Dorothy "Sunshine" Browning, adopted daughter of Edward W. "Daddy" Browning, and Clarence B. Hood, of Dunn, N. C., who were refused a marriage license yesterday, obtained the license today in the municipal building.

City Clerk Michael J. Cruise refused to issue the license yesterday because Hood was not yet 21 years old and did not have the written consent of his mother; and also because Miss Browning did not have her birth certificate and adoption papers.

The license was obtained today only after Browning himself appeared at the license bureau and Hood's brother, Henry D. Hood, made a dash by automobile from Dunn with written permission from their mother for the marriage.

Four Dogs Sentenced to Execution For Attack on Six-Year-Old Girl

By CHARLES E. LANG.

McGRAW, N. Y., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Four dogs which attacked and mangled six-year-old Joyce Hammond last Wednesday were sentenced to death today by a justice of the peace who could not find them.

The dogs, "Curley," a water spaniel; "Sport," a bull; "Jack," a mongrel, and "Pal," a police dog, browsed in the warm room as the justice of the peace, A. McGraw, ordered the animals shot. Joyce is in a hospital. Physicians may find it necessary to amputate an arm. The girl was attacked as she was returning from school.

Clearing his throat, the aged justice said: "The public must be protected. It's about time something is done. Four dogs were involved. They were criminals and it becomes a necessity, not a privilege, to sentence them to death, but to help the doctors in case rabies develops, I order the execution delayed until February 15."

best to sustain them. The court held against us on the principal features of the case, so there is no use proceeding further.

Companies concerned in the case were the Thompson, Consolidated, Chatsworth, Dalton, Douglas, Central, Georgia Continental and Southern Telephone Companies, which serve more than 60 exchanges in various parts of the state.

From the office of the comptroller general it was learned that the eight companies paid $21,599 in ad valorem taxes in 1932 for all purposes, state, county, municipal and school district. The figures for 1933 were not yet compiled but generally the tax bills of such utilities are fairly stable.

The companies' valuation for taxes in 1933 amounted to $553,950, the comptroller's records show.

From the companies' own petitions for injunction were taken figures indicating a valuation of $1,719,229 set up by them for rate-making purposes, and $37,496 which they said the enjoined rate cuts would have reduced their revenues.

The tax valuations amounted to a little less than 33 per cent of the rate base valuations, so that the additional taxes which the governor suggested might be levied would be double the amount paid on the present tax valuation.

That figure on the basis of the 1932 tax bill would be $43,198, or nearly $6,000 more than the rate cut would have cost under the companies' own figures.

That result is subject to whatever assessment deduction results from the new rates.

Here Is Background Of French Rioting

PARIS, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Although the monumental Stavisky scandal and the fall of the Bayonne pawnshop which was a French public outburst of today's fatal rioting, the trouble had its roots deep in the economic condition of France.

Young royals numbering some 10,000 who desire restoration of a French monarchy; a new group of fascist manifestos; a communist element represented in the chamber of deputies and an agrarian anti-government sentiment all had their share in the general upheaval.

Frank warnings of possible civil war and forced abdication of the republic were sounded by Premier Edouard Daladier in the chamber before the rioting commenced early this afternoon.

"The fundamentals of agitation," he declared, "lie in the economic and financial crisis. The incidents we are witnessing risk the crystallization of discontent."

Paris had seethed with anger for a month past as a result of the Stavisky scandal. It was charged that government officials were involved in the collapse of the Bayonne pawnshop.

Chautemps vigorously denied that members of his cabinet were implicated in the scandal. He said the tape of French officialdom, saying the "out-of-date French administrative system was never able to catch up with Serge Stavisky," who was a member of the cabinet, was a "black lie."

The rioters today were led by royalists, communists and were joined by a large number of unemployed who might have been new recruits had it not been that government employees, hit by government pay cuts instituted in January, refused to join them.

The riots were based on bitterness against high taxes, economic stress, parliamentary wrangling and alleged graft in high places.

The troubles budget, between 4,000,000,000 and 6,000,000,000 francs in the red at the end of 1933, was an important contributing factor in the general national unrest. In the provinces, especially in northern France and the coal mining districts, there had been a long history of unemployment and increased taxes.

France's firm determination to remain on the gold standard was "retained," today, by the premier. "We are determined to maintain our monetary system," he said.

Daladier's first heavy blow fell upon the former Police Chief Jean Chiappe, who was removed from a post as governor general of French Morocco, which he declined. This move in the premier's effort to clean up the scandal, however, met with unfavorable reactions from street crowds who demonstrated in favor of Chiappe's return to office.

into the broad Rue Royale, extending from the Place de la Concorde, 30 yards north to the Madeleine church, which blocks the end of the street. Packed there, the crowd was at the mercy of police who fired up the street.

Among the crowd jammed into the trap were Robert Pell, special attaché of the American embassy, and Harold Williams, secretary of the embassy. Pell fought his way back through the crowd and reached the Hotel Crillon, virtually the only open place for the pursued and wounded. Williams continued on up the street.

The mob vented its fury on the boulevards from the Madeleine church to the opera house, where scores of newspaper stands and booths, setting them afire and heaping benches and boards on the flames.

In this series the mob continued the battle with pursuing police. Dozens in the crowd were seen to drop when the police opened fire.

Along the boulevard the opera many stores dislaid to drop their steel curtains and as a result scores of huge plate-glass windows were smashed in the fighting. Some cases were turned into first-aid stations. A dozen wounded persons were carried into the Cafe Weber, a block above the world-famous Maxime's on the Rue Royale.

Amidst a Busy. Six ambulances centered there, carrying the wounded to hospitals as stretcher-bearers walked them in. The mobs themselves apparently did some shooting, although few were seen with arms. The most common weapons were iron pipes and stones. The police stopped and searched all available pedestrians.

All Paris sensed this to be a grave night in the history of the republic. Thousands of stores closed early and put up wooden shutters or used their iron curtains. Cafes cleared their sidewalk terraces of tables and chairs which previously had been used as missiles, and locked their doors as the rioting grew.

All the windows on the ground floor of the ministry of marine were smashed by the mob, which set it afire by tossing lighted torches into the rooms and setting the furniture ablaze. Smoke still poured out the windows an hour later.

Bullets splattered upon the Hotel Crillon and the nearby American embassy, which was protected by steel shutters and a heavy iron fence. Rioters heaped wreckage from a newspaper kiosk, chairs, tables and boxes upon the fence. Several automobiles were wrecked and tossed upon the flames.

Thousands of police were thrown into the battles. They were helped by the soldiers, who, however, were kept only in the background.

On boulevards close to the opera columns of veterans marched through the police lines shouting "Resign! Resign!"

They bore banners with such legends as "I intend that France Shall Live in Honor and Purity."

Royalists also were at the helm in the battles at Boulevard St. Germain, while in the City Hall Square communists, singing the international, dominated the fighting with their arch-enemies, the royalists, doing their share.

The fighting started first at the Place de la Concorde, where mounted guards vainly tried to clear the immense square—the scene during the French revolution—of rioting.

The cry most heard during the battles was "resign! resign!" But there were also such epithets as "thieves!" directed at the government. Some sang the French anthem the Marseillaise, and others the International.

Royalists appeared in the midst of all the fiercest fighting, while the veterans, bearing flags and banners, apparently sought to avoid violence.

A procession of 10,000 veterans, at the height of the fighting reached the rear of the chamber building where police were busy elsewhere.

They were halted by an officer commanding only a score of mobile guards. The officer opened his coat and revealed a row of medals. Then he exclaimed, "I am a veteran, too, please wait."

Veterans Obey. The veterans obeyed, but shortly a mass of police returned and drove them back.

The riots were given a slight anti-foreign tinge when foreigners were greeted in the Rue de Rivoli by manifestants who shouted, "France for the French!"

The foreigners took refuge in tourist hotels.

SILVER REDUCTION DO NOT BE SEEN

Solons Foresee This Plan as Means of Increasing Price of White Metal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP)—A reduction in the weight of the silver dollar to increase the price of the white metal was predicted today by members of congress from silver-producing states as the action likely to follow the present investigation of speculative activities in the silver market.

The process, they said, might follow the same course as the recent devaluation of the dollar in gold with the government first taking title to all stocks of monetary silver so that it, and not the private large speculators, interests might receive the profit accruing.

Other Views. But while the silverites held to this view, in other quarters the investigation of silver holdings now in progress was construed to mean that the silver group was simply seeking to learn who had been speculating in the metal.

President Roosevelt already has authorized the devaluation of the dollar without the enactment of further legislation. Discretionary power to do this was conferred upon him by an amendment to the gold devaluation bill attached by Senator Pittman, democrat, Nevada, after the silverites in the senate had amassed an impressive showing of strength that came within two votes of approving a mandatory silver provision.

Senator King, democrat, Utah, said today that he and others prominent in the silver group were arranging for a meeting of all members of senate and house from silver states within the next few days for a discussion of recent developments and a possible effort to unite upon a program. With Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, King plans to call tomorrow on Secretary of the Interior and go over the situation with him.

King and Wheeler favored remonetization of silver and free coinage at the old ratio of 16 to 1 to gold. They have been urging such a program for months with the backing of a sizeable number of silver advocates. However, they made it plain today that if President Roosevelt had some plan in mind that would be helpful they would go along with him.

The Pittman amendment gives Mr. Roosevelt authority to cut the weight of the silver dollar in the same proportion as that of the gold dollar was reduced, 40.94 per cent. Action to take this about would reduce the statutory silver dollar from 371.25 grains of the metal to 219.27 grains. Theoretically, it would increase the present mint price of newly-minted dollars from 64.12 cents to $1.17 an ounce.

Results Vary Widely.

The results of such a calculation vary widely from one individual company to another, depending on the relationship of their tax and rate valuations, the local tax rates which they pay, and the depth of the enjoined rate cut.

In another order late Tuesday, the commission announced agreed reductions, amounting in each case to 21 per cent of the present rates figured to the nearest 5 cents, for a number of small communities served by the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. The reduction is the same as the average cut for the remainder of the company's territory, which the company is seeking to enjoin.

The communities are Flovilla and Indian Springs, served out of Jackson; Concord, served out of Zebulon; Oxford and Porterdale, served out of Covington, and Isle of Hope, Thunderbolt, Cattle Park, Montgomery, Benulieu and Vernon View, served out of Savannah.

Table Shows Comparisons. The following table shows the relationship of rate bases and tax valuations, claimed revenue losses under enjoined rate-cut orders, and tax bills, of the eight Georgia telephone companies which pay taxes on the valuations on which they ask a return:

1933 assessment.	1932 valuation.	1933 deduction results.	1933 taxes paid.
Thompson	$122,500	$26,650	$3,401
Consolidated	210,000	41,208	5,098

MAN SHOT DOWN IN BARBER SHOP

Harry Wills, Presser, in Serious Condition; J. R. Ward Under Arrest.

Shot down as he stood by his clothes pressing machine in a basement barber shop at Broad and Marietta streets Tuesday morning, Harry Wills, 25, of 521 Boulevard place, Tuesday night was in a serious condition at Grady hospital. Police were holding J. R. Ward, 28, of 1530 Rogers avenue, a dry cleaner, as the alleged assailant.

Wills had just returned from the boiler room and was standing at the end of the pressing machine when the shotgun wailed leveled the weapon and fired, striking Wills in the thigh and groin and gouging considerable wood from the machine's table, it was said.

Police were told that two men, one armed with a gun, entered the barber shop and walked into the pressing room. The men left immediately after Wills was shot, and Ward later surrendered to College Park police.

D. Z. Hudson, a taxi driver, who had been sitting in the pressing room talking to Wills, was the only witness of the shooting. Police were informed. Wills told friends in the barber shop that the shotgun wailed only words to him were: "You told me a d— last night."

Ward, who has retained H. A. Allen as his attorney, refused to make any statement. Allen, however, said that he believes "we will be able to show that the shooting was justified."

Wills told associates in the barber shop that he had known Ward only briefly, and knew of no reason for the attack. Although badly wounded, Wills was able to walk from his shop to the street, where an ambulance picked him up, it was said.

HIGH COURT RULES

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Declaring the Orange county board of public instruction in barring married women from teaching "in effect, imposed celibacy and a social state akin to poverty or destitution as a prerequisite for a lady to teach," the supreme court today ruled married school teachers meeting professional requirements must be considered on an equal footing with unmarried women in employment.

Reversing a lower court decision, the court held a county board of public instruction is without authority to reject nominations of district school trustees except on valid grounds, and the mere fact that a teacher is married was held not sufficient to reject a teacher's nomination.

CAROLINA GROUP SEEKS LOCATION FOR U. S. ROAD

Gov. Ehringhaus and Senators Bailey and Reynolds. Head Delegation.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 6.—(AP)—A delegation of North Carolinians, headed by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, today described to public works regional officials and federal landscape architects and engineers "the greatest scenic highway route that could be built in America."

The North Carolinians were giving their proposed location of the federal highway to be built between the Shenandoah and the Great Smoky Mountains national parks. In brief, the argument is where the 500-mile road shall run from the peaks of Otter, in Bedford county, Virginia, to the Great Smoky Mountains park.

Yesterday's Virginia, who were agreed that the route should go from the Shenandoah to the peaks of Otter, split on the questions. In brief, the route connecting with the proposed North Carolina route, another the route connecting with the proposed North Carolina route, which is to be presented tomorrow. Both North Carolinians and the Tennesseans want the "main entrance" to the park in the "southern route" developed yesterday by one delegation of Virginians, it will run "along the crest of the Blue Ridge," he said, via the following route:

There was only a slight rustle among the spectators in the courtroom as the decision of the jury was announced.

Before the verdict was read, Judge Robert F. Duer cautioned against any demonstration, declaring it would be ruled contempt of court. Judge Joseph L. Bailey, who also sat on the case, thanked the court for the orderly way in which it received the verdict.

From the witness stand this morning Jones had denied any knowledge of the murder and presented an alibi showing he was at the home of Frank Borden, who lives near the Brumley home, at the time doctors estimated Mrs. Brumley was killed.

Sea-Going 'Mae West' Done Wrong by Sailors

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Mae West, as graceful and streamlined a sea lion as ever gulped down a mackerel, is dead—a victim of man's perfidy.

She trusted her admirers too much (most of them were sailors), and they did her wrong. Officials of Bronx Zoo announced today that the reason Mae is no longer swimming about her tank is that she was wont to accept everything folks tossed to her. A post-mortem examination disclosed that she had eaten several pounds of stones and brass buttons—sailors' buttons.

Zoo officials attributed her death to indigestion, but consoled themselves with the thought she would have drowned anyway if a few more buttons and stones had come her way.

TOKYO, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Japan, it was disclosed today, is probing the possibility of the existence of a secret treaty between the United States and China for the development of the latter's aviation.

Mrs. Arkwright Will Entertain Sheltering Arms at Tea Feb. 13

Tradition will assemble the members of the Sheltering Arms Association for tea on Tuesday, February 13, at Pinebloom, the home of Mrs. Preston Arkwright, who has issued invitations to the entire membership of this worthy organization. The occasion will honor the newly elected and retiring officers of the association of which Mrs. Arkwright was foremost in founding and has four times served as its president.

With the financial problems of the Sheltering Arms assumed by the Community Chest, and the acquisition of the two new nursery homes in the past several years, it is the desire of Mrs. Arkwright that the membership and ex-officers of the Sheltering Arms renew the happy associations that have characterized the past through a revival of the social features of the work. With this sole end in view, it is hoped that every Sheltering Arms member for years past, and every newly invited member, will respond with prompt enthusiasm to the gracious invitation. There will be no financial obligation either now or in the future. The welfare of the work, in point of interest, is the object both of Mrs. Philip Alston, the newly elected president, and the hostess, Mrs. Arkwright, always the champion and leader of civic betterment and child welfare work.

Receiving with Mrs. Arkwright will be the officers of the Sheltering Arms board, including the past presidents, and a brief program of music will feature the occasion.

Paula Causey Plays Leading Role In 'The Mollusc'

When the dramatic group of the Student Club presents "The Mollusc" by Herbert Henry Davies, on Friday and Saturday evenings, February 9 and 10, at 8:15 o'clock in the little theater of the club, Paula Causey, a recent acquisition to the theatrical circles of Atlanta will be cast in the title role.

Miss Causey has had wide experience in professional stage work, having trained under such exponents of dramatic art as Gilmore Brown, Irving Pichel, Nina Moe, Jan Van Wolfe. Her first stage appearance was in 1917 at the old French opera house in New Orleans; followed by a year at Lobero theater, at Santa Barbara, Cal., and four years at the Pasadena community playhouse, at Pasadena, Cal.

In the role of "The Mollusc" Miss Causey has a splendid opportunity for character delineation. The play has been successfully produced in England and this country by Sir Charles Wyndham, and deals with a charming but self-indulgent woman, and the reformation of her character made by her energetic brother, home on a visit from South America.

Opposite Miss Causey, in the role of the brother, is Walter Paschal, well known as actor and director in amateur productions. Atlanta claims him as her own, as he is a member of a well-known family here. He is on the editorial staff of one of our daily papers. He has had considerable experience with dramatic work having been connected with the Little Theater in Nashville, Tenn. Margaret Moss and Irwin McKoy complete the cast for the play which is under the direction of Elaine I. Minick.

The performance on Friday evening will be a preview for the members of the club followed by the social hour. At the regular performance Saturday evening non-members of the club will be asked to pay 40 cents and the public is invited to attend the presentation of "The Mollusc."

Kindergarten Alumnae

The February meeting of the Atlanta Kindergarten Alumnae Club was held recently at the Frances Virginia tea room. Lewis Skidmore, director of art at the High Museum of Art, spoke on "Child Art." The club voted to give $25 to the Atlanta Community Chest.

It was noted with interest that one of the club member's name appears in 1933 Who's Who in America, Miss Madge Bigham, as a writer of children's literature. Another member, Miss Anne Peavy, who teaches in Osaka, Japan, has been elected president of the Japanese Kindergarten Union. Miss Christine George and committee served as hostesses.

INSTALLMENT III.

Charity almost forgot she was reading a letter—and for a moment felt as though her employer were sitting there beside her talking. A faint little smile touched her lips, and all the fear and strangeness went from her.

"My boy," Charity read then, "has been a great disappointment to me so far. But, in all fairness to me, I have to admit it is probably my own fault. His mother died when he was 15 and for 10 years he has had nothing to do but play at studying art and throw my money all over the world."

"Knowing him, as I know myself, I feel certain that only the influence of a good woman will make a man of him. I have a deadly fear that he may marry someone frivolous and pleasure-loving—like himself. Or that some girl will try to take him over for his fortune."

"And so, my dear child, you must both forgive me for the strange thing I am about to do to you. You must believe it is because I love both you and my son and want the best that life can give you children."

Charity began to tremble so that the letter shook in her hands. She realized she was about to reach the climax of Temple's message. With a supreme effort she forced herself to read on:

"I am leaving half of my money to you—the other half to my son—with the provision that you are to marry within a week after the reading of my last will and testament."

The letter fell from Charity's hands and for a moment she swayed as if she were going to faint. A buzz of voices came to her, and she realized that Simmons was reading the will to Doug Temple and the others gathered in his office. She struggled bravely to regain her composure. She dared not go to pieces there.

Mechanically she picked the letter from the floor and forced herself to finish it.

"The money will not interest you yourself. That I know. But I am counting on you to carry out my last request. I cannot think of going on through life slaving in an office—or marrying a poor man and living in poverty. And you must remember all the things you can do for your family."

"Marry my son—and do the best you can to make a man of him. He may refuse to marry under the provisions I have laid down in my will but I do not believe he will. Doug would not know how to turn his hands to earning his own living. Besides I cannot believe he would disobey my dying request."

"Be as kind as you can to him. Show him the way to happiness. Give him a family of healthy boys and girls to fill your lives with joy. Then, I am about to do to you. You must believe it is because I love both you and my son and want the best that life can give you children."

Charity did not know how long she had sat with her head on the desk when Simmons opened the door. He spoke to her softly:

"Miss Jones."

She raised her head and she saw her face was mottled with tears. He closed the door and leaned against it. He was almost as shaken as Charity. In his 30 years of law practice he had never come in contact with such an unbelievable drama in real life.

"You—know, then?" he nodded to the letter.

Charity got to her feet and leaned against the desk for support.

"Yes—," she said, her voice sounding faint and hollow. "Does—Mr. Temple know?"

Simmons nodded, and passed his hand over his forehead that dripped with perspiration.

"Yes—he knows. Will you see him now?"

Charity started, panic seized her and she looked wildly around for a ray of escape. Simmons put his hand on her arm.

"There's no use putting it off, dear girl. You two have got to meet, and fight it out some time. I'll be here."

Charity sank into a chair and put her hands over her eyes.

"Give me a minute or two—alone—," she pulled myself together and went out—glad of escape. Any other girl in the world would have taken out a powder puff and rouge and repaired the damage the tears had done to her face. Charity didn't even carry cosmetics. Instead, she had put her head down on the desk and prayed frantically for strength.

A moment later a soft knock came at the door. Charity stood up, leaning again on the desk for support, and spoke through dry lips:

"Come in."

In a second Charity Jones, daughter of a poor Iowa farmer, and Douglas Simmons Temple, III, born a millionaire, stood face to face for the first time.

Charity saw a tall, danned young giant with chestnut hair which stood up, unruly and defiant as the fire that burned in his brown eyes, staring angrily at her from across the little room. He was not too stunned with the fast-moving train of events to realize that she had never seen a more perfect specimen of handsome, well-groomed man.

Doug saw a tall unattractive girl in a plain blue serge dress, with a black felt hat awry on long hair, which hung in strings around her thin white tear-stained face, gazing back at him silently. He was so greatly shocked at the first sight of the woman his father had selected to be his wife, he forgot to be a gentleman. His voice finally came to him he shook his head like a man in a bad dream.

"My father must have been—insane—to ask me to marry—you, I—couldn't possibly go through with it," Charity recoiled as though Doug Temple had struck her.

From the way he looked at her, with mingled distaste and astonishment, there was no doubt what his words meant. They ran through her brain crazily.

Stupidly Charity raised her hand to her hair and tried to arrange it. And she was suddenly aware that her nose must be red and shiny—her eyes wet from weeping. A self-conscious blush of shame swept from her neck to the roots of her hair. Clothes had never meant anything to Charity before, except as something to cover her or to keep her from getting cold. But in that moment she would have hated anything in the world to have been well-groomed—fashionably groomed.

Doug Temple looked her up and down, and shook his head again. Then he threw himself into a chair.

"I say, Miss Jones," he began then, "you must see my position in this affair. It's—quite impossible."

Charity nodded miserably, trying to speak. Doug lit a cigarette, still eyeing her with an almost amused impertinence, then suddenly he laughed a little wildly.

"It's funny, really! Poor old father taking the trouble to pick out a nice old-fashioned home girl for me before he kicked off. Mighty thoughtful—if you ask me."

Suddenly Charity felt the blessed relief of anger pouring through her almost paralyzed body. In a moment, her face that had been so white, flamed. And Doug Temple was astonished when she suddenly found her voice and whirled on him:

"How can you speak so disrespectfully of your father?"

Before the amazed young man had a chance to answer, Charity added hotly:

"And what of me? Has it ever occurred to you I might be just as unwilling to be sold into marriage as you?"

Doug looked a little surprised. Then he shrugged.

"Well—after all, it shouldn't be so difficult for a stenographer who has her father and mother to support to make up her mind to marry a millionaire. If you ask me—I think you'd be getting a damn good break."

It was so unbelievably rude that Charity gasped—and lost speech again.

"Are you sure," Doug asked her then, coolly, "you didn't hatch this plot with father yourself?"

At that Charity turned cold with anger. She ran to the door and flung it open. Simmons, waiting at his desk, jumped up when he saw her in the doorway.

"What's wrong—Miss Jones?"

Charity crossed the room and went to the outside door. Doug followed in time to see her turn and point a shaking finger at him.

"He—he's the most unspeakably rude person I've ever seen in my life," Charity said, slowly. "I wouldn't marry him if he starved to death."

"Listen here," Simmons turned to Doug impatiently, "what have you said to Miss Jones?"

Doug shrugged again.

"If my father—if she were sure she hadn't hatched up a little plot with father to try to get a little easy money for herself. You can't blame me for being suspicious of this crazy business."

Simmons whirled on the young millionaire.

"That's a rotten thing to say to a girl like Charity Jones Temple! You must apologize—at once—I demand it."

Suddenly Doug threw himself into a chair, his head in his hands.

"Oh, I suppose I did get a little too excited. But—for heaven's sake, Simmons, there is a limit, you know. I'm sorry."

Simmons turned to Charity.

"Sit down, Miss Jones, now that Mr. Temple has apologized. We've got to talk this thing over."

Charity still had her hand on the doorknob. She said icily:

"I'm afraid there's nothing to talk over. Mr. Temple made his choice and I'm sure I feel the same. It looks as though Mr. Temple will have to go out and find a job. I've had to earn my own living since I was 15. So it won't bother me much."

Simmons looked at Doug out of the corner of his eye and saw that the barb had struck home. Doug winced. The lawyer sat down at his desk and motioned to Charity to sit near him. She crossed over and sat down stiffly.

Simmons shrugged. Well, boy and girl, it's all up to you. Your benefactor left about $20,000,000 to be divided between the two of you. A great deal of it is tied up in some of the highest-priced real estate in New York. You can take it or leave it.

Charity said then, coldly, "It doesn't interest me. I wouldn't know what to do with so much money."

Miss Mason To Deliver Address On 'America Faces the Future'

Important on the calendar of future events is the address to be given by Miss Lucy Randolph Mason on Wednesday morning, February 14, at 11 o'clock at Joseph Habersham D. A. R. hall at 207 Fifteenth street. Miss Mason, as her name implies, belongs to the aristocratic Randolph family of Virginia, and merits the reputation of being a brilliant and entertaining speaker. The address will be given under the auspices of the department of government and economics of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, of which Mrs. E. Marvin Underwood is chairman. The nominal fee of 25 cents will be charged for admission.

Miss Mason arrives in Atlanta on February 13 to visit Mrs. Underwood at her home on Avery drive, in Ansley park, and will be entertained at informal social affairs previous to her appearance at Habersham hall. Miss Mason succeeds the late Florence Kelly as general secretary of the National Consumers' League in September, 1932. Before her connection with the National Consumers' League, she had been a leader in the work of national organizations interested in the protection of industrial workers. In Virginia, her own state, she participated in securing labor legislation, and served as industrial secretary of the Richmond Y. W. C. A., being its general secretary for nine years. She wrote two pamphlets on industrial subjects, the most recent one, "Standards for Workers in Southern Industry," the first compilation of its kind, was written for the National Consumers' League.

Under the direction of Miss Mason the National Consumers' League called a conference last December to discuss the widespread breakdown in labor standards, and to plan for nationwide publicity and concerted action. This national conference was the forerunner of the fight against the sweatshop. Labor standards committees were organized by the National Consumers' League in 15 states. These committees worked for hours and minimum wage legislation, and seven states passed minimum wage laws this year, six of which were based upon a standard bill drafted by the National Consumers' League. Since the first NRA code hearing, that of the cotton textile industry, Miss Mason has spent much time in Washington working for the establishment of improved labor provisions in NRA codes. She is actively promoting the program of the league in order to make NRA gains permanent through state legislation. In December, 1933, the Consumers' League held a second national conference on labor standards, the scope of which included both state legislation and improvement and enforcement of labor provisions of NRA codes. This conference was attended by representatives of nearly 70 organizations.

Miss Gay Shepperson Speaks At Meeting of Junior League

Highlighting the meeting of the Atlanta Junior League held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving Club was the talk made by Miss Gay Shepperson, civil works administrator for Georgia, on the work being directed by this group.

Miss Shepperson stressed the fact that Georgia, Fulton county, and Atlanta have a relatively small part in the monetary contributions to the relief work and stated that it seems the people in this section could do much more to help their less fortunate neighbors who are benefiting from the federal program. On the CWA pay roll there are approximately 76,000 Georgians and 7,000 more workers are being paid from F. E. R. A. funds, making a sum of over a million dollars per week which is paid them in wages, she said. According to Miss Shepperson, the number of unemployed who have applied for "real honest-to-goodness jobs" and who had never applied for relief, is amazing, and Harry Hopkins, civil works administrator in Washington, gave instructions that the jobs should be divided equally between those on relief and those on the re-employment list. In Georgia, the administrator said, education and health policies have been chiefly stressed. Numbers of schools are being built or repaired and it is assured that no Georgia schools will close for lack of funds before the normal end of the term. Better sanitation is being provided throughout the state and a number of species of poisonous insects are being fought, such as the mosquito and sand fly.

Mrs. Edward K. Van Winkle Jr., president, who presided, appointed Mrs. William Barker Jr. as chairman of the nominating committee for the officers to be elected this spring, and Miss Virginia Torrance as a member. The three members of the committee elected from the floor included Mesdames Turner Jones, William Huger and Everard D. Richardson.

Miss Letty Waterspoon, welfare secretary of the A. J. L. M., will arrive in Atlanta the middle of February to visit the Atlanta League. Miss Waterspoon is always a particularly welcome guest, as she is a former member of the Atlanta League and has a wide circle of friends here.

James Dumas Henry, who has come to Atlanta for residence since their recent marriages, were welcomed as transfer members. The former Mrs. Anne Barrett, is from the Augusta League, and Mrs. Henry, who was formerly Miss Catherine Pearson Molloy, of Lakeside drive, Chicago, Ill., is from the Chicago League. Mrs. Van Winkle was appointed as chairman of a hospitality committee to greet transfers Mrs. John Stewart, of Springfield, and other members will be named by the board.

Mrs. Preston Stevens, city editor weeks as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Glancy, of Detroit, Michigan.

Misses Carroll Hopkins and Elizabeth Hopkins, debutante daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hopkins, will leave Sunday for Miami Beach, Fla., where they will visit their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Payne, at their winter home.

In an interview regarding the conference, Mrs. Colvin said: "The twin topics for consideration at this nationwide series of regional conferences will be the 'What and When of Taxation,' and 'Why of Alcohol Education.'"

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The

recent swooping advance of the bond market encountered realizing difficulties

today and prices generally finished somewhat irregular.

While the volume of transfers to funds was $20,000,000 in value, compared with $30,000,000 in the previous session, the turnover was far above normal. The average for 60

domestic corporate issues yielded two-tenths of a point, its first setback since January 22.

Dealers were particularly impressed with the resistance shown to profit taking. Few extreme losses ran more than a point and many declines were in minor fractions. There were also quite a number of advances of a point or more.

American & Foreign Power 5s and American Waterworks 5s were heavily traded for gains of a point or more each.

Loans of American Telephone were steady. Among the losers were issues of American Rolling Mill, Childs Co.,

Liggett & Myers, Loew's and National Dairy.

U. S. government securities were quiet and a little heavy.

Foreign loans were mixed.

Market Outlook

By MAX BUCKINGHAM

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(UP)—

Stocks in activity in Common wealth & Southern stock in the last hour of trading on the stock exchange today generated a bull market for utilities and helped turn a lower market up from minimum levels.

Utilities had been firm through the first four hours of trading in an otherwise irregularly lower market. Anticipated profit-taking had depressed many groups. The market took the selling well, with volume slackening on the decline.

Sales tickers recorded sales of Commonwealth & Southern up to 2 p. m. at 41,800 shares. At almost the same time, a block of 11,000 shares of Commonwealth appeared at 3. In another minute a block of 30,000 shares appeared, also at 3. Then came 10,000 shares of Commonwealth & Southern at 3 1/8, and a series of strings involving blocks of 5,000 to 8,500 shares.

FINAL SALES HEAVY.

In that last hour total sales of Commonwealth amounted to 354,700 shares, bringing the total for the issue to 396,500 shares, or 0.16 per cent of the 4,330,000 shares traded on the entire market. The 396,500-share block was the largest individual block since March 14, 1932.

On that day an all-time record was set with a block of 180,000 shares of Kreuger & Toll at the opening at 1 7/8. Sales in Kreuger & Toll that day amounted to 675,500 shares.

Other utilities mounted to Commonwealth, which closed at 3 3/4. United Corporation had turnover of more than 110,000 shares at 1 1/2, and the general utility selling 1 to 3 points. Silver mining issues, communications and store shares were strong most of the day, but elsewhere the market was mixed. At the close, however, losses, where they occurred, were of small proportions.

No satisfactory explanation was forthcoming for the sudden activity in Commonwealth. The public is interested in low-priced issues. Such bought it heavily once the issue began to appear in large blocks. Sentiment with regard to the utilities is considerably improved over what it was a few days ago. Traders now believe there will be no drastic utility legislation in this session of congress.

AVERAGES SAG.

Industrial and railroad averages were down fractionally. The railroad average is several points under its 1933 high. If it does not break through that high on volume shortly and confirm the uptrend in the industrial, chart readers look for a decided reaction.

Now that the public is in the market, predictions are difficult. The small traders are playing the market exactly true to form. They buy a stock because it is low and has been active and jump out of it the instant it begins to move up. Such a procedure will continue for a time. Then if the market keeps up a little longer, they always break panicky and sell. Traders now believe there will be no drastic utility legislation in this session of congress.

The principal item on the docket is the French situation. The riots of the population are very serious. Incidentally they might work out favorably for the American market. French will invest here and send their money to the United States for safety. However, the adverse side is that the French may be forced off the gold standard. Such action at this time would send the dollar sharply higher and perplex the operators of our stabilization fund.

CONTRACTS SIGNED FOR CARRIER LOANS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Contracts for loans totaling $1,640,000 to two railroads to be used in steel rail purchase were signed today by Secretary Weeks, the public works administrator.

The secretary signed a loan contract for $1,400,000 with the Chicago and North Western Railway Company, the money to be used in purchasing 20,514 tons of new rails, 1,460 tons of standard rail joints and large quantities of other new maintenance equipment.

A contract for a loan of $240,000 to the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway company will permit that company to purchase 1,000 tons of tie plates and a considerable quantity of other maintenance equipment.

AUTOMOBILE SALES SHOW UPTURN IN '33

DETROIT, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Actual sales of new motor vehicles in the United States in 1933 as compiled by H. L. Fisk & Company for the registration figures in all states and the District of Columbia were 1,739,633 units. The total compared with 1,678,412 units in 1932.

New passenger car sales for 1933 totaled 1,493,748 compared with 1,496,399 in 1932, and new motor truck sales amounted to 245,885 compared with 180,413 in the previous year.

Earnings.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 6.—A general business increase was shown by the annual earnings report of the Duke Power Company, filed today with Stanley W. Warner, North Carolina utilities commissioner.

The report shows a 1933 increase in revenue of $69,975.55 over 1932.

Operating income for the entire year was listed as $13,968,887.55. The report showed that the company had 1,445,558 kilowatts of power, as compared with 1,317,500 in 1932.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The preliminary report of Press Steel Car Company, operating under receivership from Jan. 31, 1933, showed net loss of $80,963 after interest and depreciation in 1932 loss of $1,436,171.

Set income of Pacific Mills for 1933 was $1,005,200 after taxes and charges, including a non-recurring charge of $797,413 for liquidation of the Lawrenceville mill. The company had net loss of $5,641, 1932 after an inventory write-down of $300,000.

Suspect Held.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 6.—(AP)—A man, who gave his name as Thomas Fazzioni and said he was wanted in New York, was held in jail here today after being arrested while attempting to break into a parked automobile.

For a little girl. It seemed wisest for every one concerned to let Joan stay with her relatives in the United States.

Joan was always glad to get letters from abroad, although her mother was little more than a dim memory to her.

Joan was 9 years old. It was just about seven years ago that she had come to live with her Aunt Nancy and her Uncle Peter. During all the years they had looked after her, cared for her, loved her. Her own mother, who was Nancy's sister, had traveled first for her health and then later had gone with her husband, Joan's father, on a diplomatic mission in the far east. This was no place for a child.
